

Operation Africa

Introduction Into The Expedition

Our team are embarking on an expedition to travel from one of the northern most countries of Africa, down to South Africa over a 45-day period. Whilst on this expedition, our aim is to not only spread awareness on the living conditions in some parts of the continent, but to also provide educational lessons of Math and English to village communities that don't necessarily have the opportunities we have back home in the UK. We believe that our team of three, coupled with our trustworthy off-road vehicle, can provide a real life impact on the communities of the armed forces with the money raised for our charities and help those less fortunate in aspects such as education in Africa.

Funds

An ambitious expedition requires a suitable amount of fundraising to cover all aspects of transport, safety, and resources to meet our targets. Below is an overview of our current financial standing:

- Raised so far via GoFundMe: £5,249
- Raised via Bucket Collection: £1007.68
- Further £4100 Pledged and will receive on evidence of challenges.
- Target: £20,000.

*We have many charity events planned in the spring and summer. In addition to this we expect our money raised for charity to increase exponentially once awareness of our campaign begins to grow via the expected showing on the famous Phil Campions, Force Radio HQ podcast and hopefully our very own Royal Navy Newspaper.

Route

Our route is planned based on completing it within our time frame, whilst still maintaining a suitable amount of time during our expedition to make a strong impact

Start: Marrakesh, Morocco
Finish: Cape Town, South Africa

Distance: 11,651.4 km.

*We have various mapped plans for every eventuality. We are well read in past and current news. Well researched in past successful and failed attempts on the endeavour.

Dates (Main Event)

2nd-9th of August (Buffer week)

Conclusion

This expedition serves as an opportunity to highlight the beauty and diversity of Africa, while drawing attention to social economic and environmental challenges across the continent. It also fosters cross cultural connections and demonstrates the power of collective effort in making a difference. Finally and more importantly it spreads a positive image of Great Britain and her Armed Forces, at a time when so much negativity around our great nation is spread.
